this is an age old question. Over the years one program may have had advantages over the other, But Both programs are good for doing silk screen tee shirt artwork.

This is like asking me " Which is best to get from point a to point b? a Ford truck or Volvo sports-car?"

Both will get you there in the same amount of time.... Unless you Speed . One may be more comfortable or get better gas, Bottom line usually is the initial cost and what you are more comfortable with!

My personal opinion is that Corel is starting to cater more to the need of the t-shirt screen print artist then Adobe.. However, I don;'t have a clue how to use Corel except in Illustrator mode.
